

-- a photograph of Beth Ann Gardner Hauenstein

EG: "That's his (Milo Robert Gardner) sister. She was married in October. In that picture she's wearing my mother's red wedding dress. She was going to wear it at her own wedding but it was too tight. She was married over in Aldenville."

-- a photograph of Henry Banning Curtis

-- the wedding table of Harriet Curtis and Milo Gardner

-- the wedding table of Louisa Griswold and Henry B. Curtis

-- a lamp that belonged to Jeremiah Gardner (1832-1865)

---

On December 31, 1977, SRP and DWP visited with Edith and Gertrude Gardner at 80 Cemetery Street, Carbondale, Pa. During that visit it was learned that:

21. Foster's Photographic Studio was across the street from Cramer's (which was located above Lilje's Shoe Store).
22. The Clinton Grange Hall is located on the North and South. Going North, the Grange Hall is the next building on the left just beyond the Francis Earl Loomis house.
23. When the Francis and Jane (Loomis) Griswold property was divided up by their heirs (Nathan, Louisa and Laura), Laura agreed to have less than Louisa--Laura had borrowed some money from her sister, Louisa, and she re-payed the debt by giving her sister a portion of her (Laura) inheritance.
24. A grandson of Eliza Jane Curtis (one of the sisters of Edith and Gertrude Gardner's mother) currently lives in the Francis Earl Loomis house. His name is Arthur Corey. Another grandson of Eliza Jane Curtis delivered oil at 80 Cemetery Street on the morning of December 31, 1977.
25. Gertrude Gardner Snyder was one of the students of Edna Loomis at Carbondale High School.
26. EG: "Edna [Loomis] was older than Ray [Gardner]. She used to come over here from 161 Lincoln Avenue and take Ray out for a ride in the carriage."